Nordique Moss Scarf

Designed by: Véronik Avery

Nordique – 100% wool

From the sheep whose fleece was used to spin Nordique to the mill producing it, every part of it is American made. The fleece is a blend of different breeds whose classification is referred to as 'territory wool'—it is a medium range wool, neither too soft to withstand everyday wear, neither too coarse to be worn against the skin. I also wanted it to recall vintage sweaters, having often come across decades old garments that barely looked a few seasons old. To that end, a worsted mill was ideal, as combing the fleece before spinning it not only aligns the fibers in a parallel fashion but also reduces the number of shorter fibers in the yarn which contribute to pilling. Most yarns today are spun by woolen mills where most of the fibers through the process and make for a softer, loftier yarn.

In the end, Nordique is everything I hoped for: it's highly elastic and has just enough 'grab' for stranded color, and has a high affinity for texture.
